Students Vote Today for Carnival Queen

Five Finalists Fend For Forum Finish

By DON ALLEN

Today is election day. For close to a week now the candidates' pictures have attracted crowds around campus noticeboards. Today the student body will cast the deciding votes to choose McGill's Winter Carnival Queen of 1951.

The five names on the ballots are those of the five finalists that were selected last Tuesday at a tea at the Royal Victoria College: Dusty Baxter, Rose Huycke, Lois Marcou, Helen Noltie, and Martha Wickenden.

Miss Baxter is in second year architecture and is from St. Lambert, Que. Miss Huycke B.Sc. II, from Toronto, Ont. Miss Marcou, B.A. II, from Hanover, N.H. Miss Noltie, B.A. II, from Westmount, Que., and Miss Wickenden, B.Sc. IV, from Three Rivers, Que.

The polling booths are set up in various buildings on the Campus and will be open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Redwings will be in attendance and the polls will remain open during the lunch hour in order to enable those with a full schedule of lectures to cast their votes for carnival queen.

Both men and women students will be eligible to vote in the contest.

Students of Law, Medicine, Engineering, and Architecture will vote in those respective buildings. All others will vote in the Arts Building; the men's and women's polling booths being located in their respective Common Rooms. This means that a total of 16 groups will be casting their ballots in the Arts Building common rooms.

A heavy vote is anticipated and 5,000 ballots have been prepared, a member of the Winter Carnival executive told The Daily last night. Red Wings at the polls will be provided with class lists and will initial the ballots that they issue. No posters or other publicity for the candidates will be permitted in the vicinity of the polling booths.

It was emphasized that the name of the winning candidate—McGill's 1951 Carnival Queen—will not be revealed until Friday evening. It will be announced as she appears on the ice at the Forum Night to be crowned by Montreal's Mayor Camillien Houde in the event that is planned as the highlight of the proceedings. The runners-up in the election will act as the Queen's attendants during the entire Winter Carnival week-end. Ann Dohan, last year's Queen, will also be present at the Coronation.

The five finalists will be selling copies of the Floating Rib on the campus today, will be present on Mt. Royal tomorrow night at the Forum Night and Coronation on Friday, and, as the Queen and her attendants, at all subsequent events in connection with this year's Winter Carnival.

Books Released To Help Design Contestants Here

In order to help those competing in the Industrial Design contest for better designs in wood and aluminum, the latest books on Industrial Design by recognized authorities in Great Britain and the United States can now be obtained in three libraries in Montreal. These books were presented to the Bibliotheque Municipale, the Fraser Institute Free Public Library and the Westmount Public Library by the National Gallery of Canada on the recommendation of the National Industrial Design Committee. This contest offers prizes up to ten thousand dollars, and is open to everyone.

As a result of this gift, aspiring designers can obtain the background information they need to develop functional designs of contemporary merit for the contest. The subjects of the books range from such down to earth titles as "Self Training For Industrial Designers" to such advanced theoretical works as "Vision in Motion,"

Evelyn Knight Will Start Puck Game

Evelyn Knight, vocalist and Decca recording artist will lend her hand to McGill's Winter Carnival Forum Night this year.

She is to face off the puck at the Carnival hockey game between the McGill Redmen and Les Carabins of the University of Montreal which is to be the opening event of Forum Night which is to be climaxed by the coronation at midnight by Montreal's Mayor Camillien Houde of McGill's Winter Carnival Queen of 1951.

Miss Knight is a native of Washington, D.C., where she made her professional debut at the King Cole Room. She is at present on a personal appearance tour which was launched after a two year appearance on the "Club 15" broadcast which originated in Hollywood and was heard over a nation-wide hookup including Montreal's CFCF.

Several other feature events have been planned for Forum Night, according to a member of the Carnival staff.

Between periods the spot light will flick over to centre on the new McGill Band which will present a few orchestration specially arranged for it. As their closing number the band will give a rendition of "Sleigh Ride" which is the Carnival Theme song of the year.

Following the hockey game a full 20 minutes skating extravaganza will be presented.

The closing event of the evening will be the crowning of the Carnival Queen by Mayor Camillien Houde.

Translator of 'Naked' Sends Best Wishes

Frank Corsaro, the American author and director, has sent the Arena Wing of the Players Club, his very best wishes for good luck with this extraordinary play, "Naked" which is being produced from February 26 to March 3rd in the Ballroom of the Union.

Mr. Corsaro, whose original translation of "Naked" is being used by the Arena Wing for this production, has also offered to give the Arena Wing any assistance they might need with this production. However, he feels that the spirit of the improvisation dominates Pirandello, the author of the play, and so he has given the Arena Wing permission to make any departure from the script that they might feel was necessary in order to express their own particular view of the play.

McGill Students Will Debate Auto Insurance

Two McGill students Tim Porteous, and Tram Malcolm will debate against a team from the Montreal Young Men's Canadian Club. The debate will be held at the Canadian club next week-end. The resolution to be debated is "Resolved that Auto Insurance be organized on a co-operative basis and be made compulsory to all car owners."

Sculptures Rated Today Parade Tomorrow

The Snow Sculptures that have been springing up rapidly all over the campus will get their big chance today—for today is "Snow Sculptures Judging Day."

Between 2 and 3 this afternoon, the judging committee consisting of Vic Obeck, Director of Athletics, Eric Coulter, Chairman of the Sports Committee, Ted Tilden, Co-Chairman of Publicity, and Ann Skalth, Representative of the "female appreciation of art", will make the rounds of all the statues and sculptures, and then render their decision as to which is the best effort.

Meanwhile the plans and schedule for the Grand Pre-Carnival Parade, scheduled to take place at noon Thursday, have been announced by Carnival Chairman, Jim Ross.

"The success of the Carnival could very well hinge on the success of the opening day parade. Its main purpose is to bring home to Montrealers the fact that this is a very large undertaking and that McGill is solidly behind it. It is my hope that every student will turn out for it," said Ross.

According to the Sports Committee, the Parade has been planned on a "grandiose" scale and "it needs only the co-operation of the student body to turn it into a most impressive affair."

The schedule for the parade will be as follows: Jim Ross will open

Communists Drive to Cut Off U.N. at Seoul

Korea: Blasting with tanks and artillery, Chinese Communists were driving southward in the mountains of Central Korea, threatening to cut off American troops fighting in the outskirts of enemy Seoul. Fighting desperately to stem this drive, the main force of which is expected to shift westward towards Seoul, Allied forces were holding their lines at a point 35 miles west of Seoul.

Claiming new tactics Fifth Air Force officials claimed that pilots had found the answer to Communist camouflaging of military vehicles and were claiming 200 vehicles destroyed or damaged in yesterday's fighting.

Tokyo: General MacArthur returning to his headquarters here after a tour of inspection of the Korean front, said that "talk of crossing the 38th parallel except by patrols at this is purely academic." The general emphasized the fact that the UN is involved in a military manoeuvre and that it would be military factors and not political ones that will keep the UN troops south of the 38th parallel for the present.

A far greater toll of Chinese life must be taken, the general believes before the Allies can expect a military decision. General MacArthur is known to believe the campaign can only be won by full control of North Korea. Again, for the fourth time in a public appeal MacArthur asked for permission to bomb Chinese bases.

Lake Success: Twice today, the U.N. gave the United States thumping votes of confidence as the world body defeated a Russian resolution condemning the U.S. as an aggressor against Formosa. At the same time it also refused to slap the U.S. for bombings of Chinese territory along the North Korean border. The Russian resolutions were defeated by votes 48-5 and 51-5 respectively.

Reaffirming American support of the Chiang regime of what is left of Nationalist China, Edward A. Gross, U.S. delegate, said that the U.S. government was opposed to letting the Peking regime into the U.N. as long as they continue their aggression in Korea.

No Daily Friday

As lectures and lab periods will be cancelled all day Friday to allow students to attend the McGill excursion to St. Sauveur as part of the Winter Carnival program, there will be no Daily that day. Organizations desiring to announce events taking place this week-end should have all material in The Daily offices by 3 p.m. today. Announcements for the Coming-Events column must be in The Daily letter box in the lobby of the Union by 1 p.m., as usual.

Model Parliament Upholds Liberal Government Bill

Bilingualism Is Precedent in House

By ETHEL GOLDSTEIN

The Model Parliament held last night was definitely one of precedents; it was the first time in five years that a bilingual parliament was held and it was the first time this year that the House was filled to capacity. The atmosphere was tense and the House was pervaded with noisy excitement but the Speaker kept matters well under control.

The parliament was graced with the presence of the five Carnival nominees. It was in regard to their presence that an L.P.P. member raised the question whether "semi-royalty is permitted to attend and whether King George VI is permitted more than one wife."

This question was greeted by general laughter. Another L.P.P. member asked the Liberal government to influence the provincial government to use its "underground forces" to build a subway in Montreal. The government was also questioned by the National Conservatives as to their intentions concerning an investigation of the "sabotaged" Duplessis Bridge. A Liberal party spokesman replied that his party had not been asked to examine the matter.

The mysterious Republican party from the U. of Montreal, rumored to be pacifists, were conspicuous last night by their absence.

MR. JUSTICE BISSONETTE
... an enjoyable evening

Bissonette Praises Parliament Procedure

When questioned as to the relative merits of the standard of debate in last night's Model Parliament, and the Legislature assembly over which he presided for many years, Mr. Justice Bissonette who was speaker of the House last night, said, "The debating is similar. I cannot say that the quality of the two can be compared equally, but the arguments in this instance were, in the main, well presented." It was a very enjoyable evening.

ASUS Issues Appeal to Club

Meaning of Marriage Raginsky Addresses R.V.C. On Marital Psychology

By FRANCES HOLLAND

"Some Psychological Aspects of Marriage" was the topic of a talk given by Dr. B. B. Raginsky at R.V.C. last night. This was one in the series of lectures sponsored annually by the Women's Union in conjunction with the Alumnae.

In his remarks Dr. Raginsky said that to have a successful marriage one must have a normal personality and emotional maturity, the latter being one of the hardest things in the world to obtain. A person must learn to live without their parents or substitutes, and must be able to live within themselves. The mature person, he added, has a real grasp of reality, can understand the problems of others.

Dr. Raginsky cited four foundations or pillars for emotional maturity, the first being to have a normal personality, and the second to have the ability to make decisions easily and quickly without procrastination. He said the third pillar was to possess a satisfactory capacity for work without need for change or holiday. For the final pillar he stressed the ability to love someone else besides ourselves — and see their point of view, not because we are in sympathy with it, but because there is some reason

Liberals Win; Amendments Defeated

By ALLAN BERNFELD

The strains of "O Canada", sung in French, resounded through the Union last night as McGill's best Model Parliament of modern times broke up. As Justice Bissonette was applauded from the hall, and as the House members settled down to the less partisan activity of an informal dance, the general feeling of those present was that it had been one of the finest political debates yet seen at McGill.

Justice Bissonette, who has had long experience as Speaker of the provincial legislature, showed the House just what could be accomplished by controlled debate. Only once in the entire session was order lost, and it was quickly regained when the dissenters were shouted down by the balance of the House.

When the final vote was taken, after a count had been demanded, it was done by systematically counting every member as he or she arose in turn to register a vote. There was absolutely no confusion or doubt about the total.

Debate was opened by Duncan Frazer, deputy Prime Minister, for the Liberal Government, who indicated that the proposed measures of economic and military aid to Asia were a task which Canada, as a free nation, must undertake.

"Communism preys on hunger, poverty, and illness," he said. "Canada can demonstrate goodwill to Asia by economic aid, and this, coupled with military assistance, will make Asia free to choose for herself the future course of her affairs and her governments."

The motion of adoption of the bill was carried by a voice vote, and Gilles Duguay, first speaker for the U. of M. Conservative-Nationalists, arose to state that the white man is "a dead duck" in Asia, and that Russian imperialism will destroy itself exactly as western imperialism has already done so. Asia is searching for a middle course, he said, but the bill would force her to choose Communism or war, and Communism would be the inevitable choice.

Robert Tate, speaking for the C.C.F. group, stated that supervised distribution of economic aid was necessary, and an Asian pact, like the North Atlantic alliance, would insure increasing military strength against Communism.

Jean Trudeau, Liberal Prime Minister, stressed the need for "a common understanding between the donors and the recipients" of the economic and military aid. Camille Dionne, speaking for the L.P.P., pointed out that the bill would in effect be imposing a regime on the countries receiving this aid, and that they would not accept.

This issue of The Floating Rib is a special Winter Carnival issue, and the candidates will be vending the magazine from 11:45 a.m. on, all through the day.

What Is Nifcus? Campus Journals Explain Many Functions and Work of NFCUS

Hamilton, Ont.—(CUP)—The following article appeared in The Silhouette, student newspaper of McMaster University, in conjunction with a description of the work of NFCUS on the McMaster campus.

The functions, aims, and ideals of NFCUS, or to give it its full title, National Federation of Canadian Universities, were recently explained in detail by two campus newspapers.

"What does NFCUS stand for?" asks The Ubysey, the University of British Columbia paper; and "What is NFCUS?" echoes the Georgian, official organ of Sir George Williams College of Montreal.

The Ubysey answers its own question by outlining concisely the many activities of the organization. "This national body . . . is the only representative national body with the power to express the thoughts and actions of the university student as an organized unit."

"NFCUS . . . acts as a central committee for boiling down and consolidating the needs of the university . . . has been urging the Federal government to begin a plan of national scholarships, etc., entitling all high school graduates with the intellectual ability to attend a university, regardless of the economic ability to do so . . . serves to bring representative students from every region together for seminar, exchanges and conference."

It provides many miscellaneous services of a varied nature pertaining to inter-varsity correspondence, the Canadian University Press, information concerning student summer travel overseas, etc. The paper goes on to state that, despite the seemingly limited accomplishments, NFCUS is filling a useful function now and "is expanding and maturing into a nature of considerable consequence in the Canadian university arena."

Something We Accept and Forget

Canada's dual personality is something of which we at McGill are extremely proud, living as we do in the largest centre of French Canada. But it is something which we have come to accept, and perhaps mistakenly, to accept and forget.

This week, however, will have seen two outstanding examples of acceptance and enjoyment of both sides of the Canadian personality. The presence of our French-Canadian confreres from across the mountain lent much to last night's Model Parliament, and tomorrow McGill will welcome a delegation of "Les Carabins" from Laval for the Carnival weekend.

The events are ones in a desert. As a whole McGill students live in a vacuum by themselves as regards the aspects of the French Canadian culture around them. Our campus tends to extent its focus more or less west along Sherbrooke street, and even in a physical sense students avoid French Montreal.

It is all too true that the average student at this University has little contact with the broad and enlightening culture literally at his doorstep.

This week two attempts are being made to do something about the situation. For those who missed the experience of last night's Model Parliament, there is still the opportunity to welcome Laval tomorrow. This gesture should not be merely an exchange of courtesies between two University student bodies, nor merely a sign of the racial unity that makes Canada. It should be, at least by McGill students, an attempt to discover something about Canada's other half, and an attempt to show the Laval students what makes up a McGill personality.

During the coming week-end it will be the duty and opportunity of every student to help out the travellers in the red and yellow. May they carry it off to their advantage, and may the spirit of mutual understanding encouraged by the Laval visit continue to express itself throughout the year.

Letters to The Editor

No Mention of Vice-President

Dear Sir:

There has been much criticism of the Students' Athletics Council voiced in the McGill Daily through this academic year. I feel that a criticism of the present S.A.C. is one also directed at myself. However, in any position one is liable to criticism, and I do not feel that it is necessary to answer such critical remarks at this time. If any student or student body wishes to criticize the S.A.C. or myself, he may do so, but it would be well for this individual or group to have a substantial reason for such criticism. I am not attempting to defend my position, but rather enlightening the student body as to the true facts.

The most recent criticism of the S.A.C. and especially myself, appeared in Monday's Daily, regarding the denial of vote to the S.E.C.'s Vice-President, Charles Taylor. The Constitution of the S.A.C. reads: "Article III, The S.A.C. shall be composed of the following members. Section 2 (a) President of the Students' Society." There is no mention that, in case of his absence, the Vice-President should have his vote. However, if the President of the Students' Society wishes to submit a notice of motion to this effect, to the S.A.C., he is free and welcome to do so.

D. P. WALTER,
Chairman of the Students' Athletics Council.

In the story reader Walter refers to, The Daily did not for itself criticize either him or the S.A.C., but only reported news and comments concerning an important S.A.C. meeting. In that news story, The Daily quoted the President of the Students' Society as saying that he was surprised that the Vice-President, who had attended the meeting in his stead, was denied a vote. The President also said that to his knowledge the Vice-President had always been allowed to vote in such cases in the past.

To throw further light on the matter, The Daily asked Mr. Isadore Rosenfeld, who as Vice-President of the Students Society last year attended S.A.C. meetings in the place of the President, to comment on what the procedure had been during his term of office. Mr. Rosenfeld said:

"When I read The Daily's article, I found it difficult to believe that the Vice-President of the Students' Society, who by the Students' Society constitution (Article 5, Section A: The Vice-President shall perform the duties of the President in the absence of the latter) should have been given a vote, was denied it on so crucial a matter."

"I recall to the S.A.C., and in particular to its Chairman, my presence at at least two of its regularly held meetings last February when, as Vice-President of the Students' Society, I participated in discussion and in the ultimate voting on such matters as the formation of the M Club at McGill and the Joint S.E.C.-S.A.C. Banquet. Such participation by me was in no way a precedent. Throughout the years whenever the President of the Students' Society has been unable to attend S.A.C. meetings, the Vice-President has always done so and voted, not by courtesy of the S.A.C. but by virtue of student law and constitution."

"If the dogmatic ruling by the Chairman of the S.A.C. is to be carried to its logical extremes, then any incapacitating effects on the life of the President of the Students' Society, such as sickness, examinations, or marital difficulties, which would prevent him from attending S.A.C. meetings, would leave 7,000 students at McGill and the Students' Executive Council without any effective representation on the S.A.C."—Ed.

Our Indignant Sentiment

Dear Sir:

What is all this indignant sentiment about the failure of "Your Poor Little Rooster" to bring New York to its feet in acclaim of "Til-Coo"? You "all" (yes, I'm a southerner) seem to be preoccupied with the thought that the only reason it was not accepted was because the play was an all-Canadian venture. Surely this is the rallying cry of a child in kindergarten. The people south of the border, as some Canadians derisively refer to Americans, are not really so self-centered as to discriminate against everything non-American, and least of all Canadian. There have been many American plays that received the same, if not worse, onslaught from the Broadway critics. Don't think the critics on Broadway were wringing their hands in anticipation of a glutinous professional feast at the expense of Fridolin.

There is much talk these days of a Canadian culture which is suffering and being retarded because of American influence. Now is your opportunity to prove to yourselves that you can tell the Americans where to go, by saying this is good in spite of Broadway. If you don't believe it yourselves, however, don't blame it on the "Yankies".

JOE A. LUCIA, B.Sc. II

As a matter of fact, when The Daily reviewed "Til-Coo", back on November 20 of last year, Daily Reviewer Milton Winston faced up to just that problem. He answered it thus:

"How will it stand up with Broadway, and on Broadway? Then comes the voice of authority; The Americans will not understand it; how can it be a good play since it's only a local affair."

"To borrow a phrase from the play itself, 'To Hell; this play is good whether the New Yorkers accept it or not.'—Ed.

Essence of Beauty

Dear Sir:

Can anyone imagine our mortification at discovering that the designers of "Jack Frost" were not only Architects but were members of our own class? We are sure that we would not let too many people know, if we were responsible for said colossus.

Aesthetically speaking, the framework, as it stands now, probably looks a great deal better than the finished product will look, if and when it is ever finished. Our attention was particularly attracted by the delicate pieces of rag, which are hanging from the higher reaches of the superstructure, their hanging, dirty and sodden, in spite of the breeze is no doubt the essence of beauty.

Please Mr. Editor, see that something is done either to remove this blemish on our campus or to have it covered with snow tout de suite.

M. BROWN, J. E. LARIVIER

Those Fabulous Five

by Amnon Kahn and Lionel Lustgarten

Your Choice for Cornygal Queen?

Have you been unable to sleep this past week? Have your conflicting psychological processes thrown you into a state of indecision and turmoil? Have you been kept awake wondering who to cast your Cornygal Queen ballot for?

Lana

In order to relieve the inner tensions which have been mounting up in your innermost self, your humble reporters undertook to discover the mystery which cloaks those Fabulous Five. After much probing, we found our first contestant completely enclosed in a snow statue which now adorns the lower campus. Several buckets of hot water later, we were able to sublimate the first few words from Lana's lips. As the transition from the solid state to hot air took place, we asked: "Why did you choose to come to McGill?" With a puzzled expression on her face, she answered with a voice that occasionally hit high "G" and then broke. "I didn't choose to come to McGill. I was forced to." After ascertaining that the reason for this was that the Draft Board was catching up with her, we then decided to look further in search of the rest of those Fabulous Five.

Jacqueline

As the clock of the Arts building struck five to the hour, we noticed a figure hurtling down the corridor of the second floor, and as we attempted to pick ourselves off the ground, we recognized it to be another contestant, Jacqueline. She quickly applied the brakes and slid to a non-skid stop. In answer to our question as to why she thought that she had a better opportunity than the others to achieve the position of Cornygal Queen, she replied, "I feel that the shape that this contest is taking is one which should be carefully considered before we can entertain any opinions which may pertain in an undesirable manner to the somewhat ostentatious way in which the superior qualities of those aspiring to the crown..." and as she continued, we turned away. The intellectual type, we muttered in disgust, reflecting upon the place of such individuals at the Royal Institution for the Advancement of Learning.

Donna

Well, perhaps there was more success in store. Suddenly an immense noise tore its way across the Campus. It sounded as though a chain reaction had been set up in the continuum of the atmosphere. A closer examination revealed that it was only a public address system, set up on the lower campus, announcing to all and sundry the appealing qualities of Donna. We found Miss Donna standing in front of the loudspeaker, in an effort to prevent the sound from reaching the offices of the Arts Building and Union, where members of the S.E.C. may have been situated. "Tell us," we blared into her hearing aid to offset the effects of the environment. "What are your impressions of the way that McGill is running its biggest edition of the Winter Cornygal?" It took several minutes for the full import of this vital question to reach the depths of her intelligence, but when her eyes appeared to take on a new vitality, and her entire Cupid face began to emit beta rays, we realized that we had been successful in contacting her. She began to reply to us in a voice which approached the lowest regions of... well, just the lowest regions. "I have found that I am the only one who has anything to offer the students, because of the fact that I am so much superior to my opponents." With this statement, she turned her back to us and became involved with one of the contest judges...

Our efforts to locate Marguerite were to no avail, because as we discovered later, she was busy studying a course on "How to Win Professors and Influence Marks".

Miss Betsy

As the sun faded away from the campus amidst a descending aure of snow statues, we came upon our final contestant, Miss Betsy, accompanied by a flock of P.E. (partly educated) students, on their way to the Greasy Spoon Restaurant. "And what statement have you for the press?" we asked her. "Not very much," she said as she shifted her slide rule from one hand to the other, "for people must see me to appreciate me. But tell the boys that no one can bring more glory to this campus than a bright young P.E. student." With these words she bid us a fond farewell wending her way towards her wistful location.

It's All Yours

"Now we have it," we exclaimed jubilantly to ourselves. Now we know the secret behind the popularity of the Cornygal Queen.

THE WESTERN LEGEND

You've just got to hand it to those Western Mustangs whether they be posing in football or basketball uniforms. Even if you're inclined to dislike John P. Meiras and his warriors, as many do, it must be admitted that the Londoners literally ooze with color.

The tip-off is the tremendous crowds present whenever the Mustang men come to town. In football a Western game is the spectacle of the season. In basketball the usually lethargic fans will brave the cold, wind and rain to see the perennial champs in action.

Why do fans swarm to see them perform? The answer is fairly obvious. Everyone around here wants to see them lose. But they never do. They have been kingpins for so long that once a fellow puts on a Western uniform he develops a superiority complex. It's like the old New York Yankee tradition in baseball. Cast-offs become reborn when they feel the Yankee Stadium turf under their feet. They play as they have never played before, namely, way over their heads.

And so it is with winning Western. Meiras seems able to instill the top-dog spirit into his charges who feel that they must rise to the heights when wearing the purple and white. Nine straight basketball titles (including this season) and a football record as good over the last decade attest to this fact.

A good example was provided before the Western-McGill cage contest Friday night at the Gym. Bob Phibbs, the Mustang big gun, was talking to a friend, a McGill student, and the latter happened to mention that the Redmen had quite a club this year.

Phibbs, tremendously impressed by this bit of inside dope on the Red and White teams, practically laughed in his face by saying, "We'll take them by 15 points." Well, the Mustangs didn't win by 15, but they did win handsily enough by 9. And if you think Mr. Phibbs is a pop-off guy, just remember he scored 19 points in that game and followed it up with an 18 point burst in Kingston as the Westerners bombarded the Gaels by 12 points the next night.

The same theory can be applied in football. McGill had a powerhouse this year. Take no credit away from Vic Obeck and his players. The Redmen put on a great show this fall, giving their followers the best football McGill has shown in years, but when the chips were on the line, when everything hung in the balance, the Mustangs were around to collect the trophies.

Without a doubt, the Mustangs are the "old pros" of college sport in eastern Canada.

COMING THE CAMPUS—Has-kell Blauer, an amateur photographer in his spare time, has been taking pictures for the Daily of late.... There's a good deal of talk

Schacter's Tribe Of Inter Indians Hep for Gaels

Manny Schacter's Intermediate Indians have, as the saying goes crossed the Rubicon. The Schacter tribe is frequently working out in preparation for what is perhaps their most important cage contest of the season. Together with the senior Redmen, the Indians will invade Kingston to do battle with the Queen's Gaels hoopia squads.

Sporting a record of five wins in their seven league games, the Inter have scored a total of 369 points as against 283 for the opposition. The squad has notched 132 of these 369 points in their last two indicate that the Indians have fine games. This fact would seem to ally found the range.

If this fact is true, the Tricolor would do well to look out. The Indians always have been a potential powerhouse on paper. However the team started slowly, possibly because they were literally thrown into the lion's den. Two of their early opponents were the mighty squads of the University of Montreal and Ottawa U. Both of these teams had been playing ball weeks before the Indians got going. The Carabins playing in local Golden Ball ranks and the Capital boys meeting up with American opposition. As a result McGill lost both these contests.

Slowly but surely, Manny Schacter worked the kinks out of his boy's systems and little by little the team's calibre of play improved. At the moment it looks like the Indians are hitting their peak.

One quality the squad does not lack is depth. The team is built on sharpshooters like Mel Mikilso, Doug McNichol, the big centre, fouled out Friday night, he looked down the bench, saw nothing, and turned to Don Hunt, the 6'6" publicity man, and barked, "Hunt, put on a uniform!" John settled for a fellow named Gord Davidson...

Women's Intramural Allotments Explained

Intramural sports play a great part in campus athletics, but few students really understand the intricate setup of the intramural program. In the next few paragraphs an attempt will be made to explain the point system.

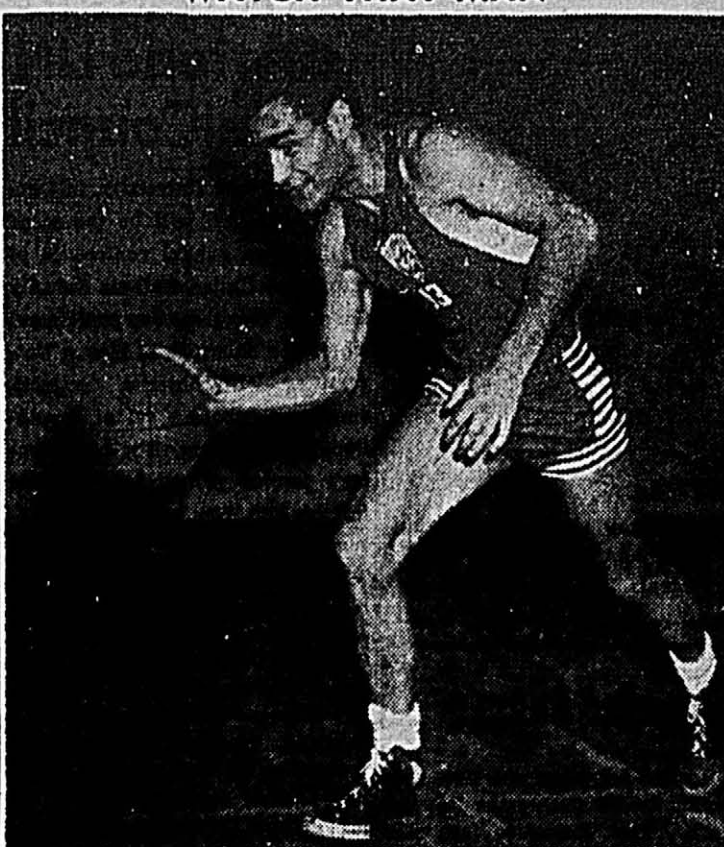

Badminton, squash, fencing, tennis, basketball, riflery, archery, swimming, and skiing are all included on the intramural slate. Games are scheduled between various years of the different faculties, and all points are awarded, not to individuals, but to the teams year. No distinction is made between late.... There's a good deal of talk and Ph. Ed. III's points are added together to swell the total points for year III.

There are five main types of tournaments, and each sport may be included in one or all of them. The elimination tournament is further subdivided into two parts. Firstly, the elimination of teams in such sports as badminton and squash, where each member of the winning team scores 25 points for her year, while everyone on the second place squad adds 15 points for her year. Tennis, badminton, fencing, and squash come under the heading of the elimination of individual players; in this instance the winner gains 30 points, and the runners — up 20, while every girl who enters and wins at least one game earns 5 points.

WATCH THAT MAN

Yes, that's just what the opposition will have to do to keep the "Smiler" down, now that he has found his shooting eye. SMILEY WILSON has been with the Senior team for quite a while and has always been a constant threat and a sound two-way player.

Hockey Braves Engage League Leading Loyola

By MORTY GLICKMAN

The McGill hockey Braves are scheduled for a double assignment during the course of two days, in which time they will engage the presently league leading Loyola Warriors and the fourth place Bishop's College.

Two wins on these night would give the Braves undisputed possession of first place in the Ottawa St. Lawrence Hockey Conference. However a loss to Loyola would probably mean the end of the championship hopes for McGill, who have won the title for the two years the league has been in existence.

At present they are tied for second place with R.M.C. Incidentally the Braves took the college cadets into hand last week at Kingston by a score of 4-3.

The game against the Warriors is scheduled for tonight. The last time these two teams met the Braves came from behind to tie the score at 3-3. The Warriors are very tough to handle and have some mighty sharpshooters sharpshooters in the persons of Mike Connelly and Bob Bedard. Bedard is burning up the league presently with an almost two goals per game average.

Connelly is also doing well in his own right. He has been a frequent scorer of late and can be counted on to be a consistent thorn in the side of the Braves all night.

McGill Gymnasts Face Tough Varsity Crew

By FRED LOWY

Under the watchful eye of Coach Howie Ryan a small group of eager beavers have been working out steadily for the past few weeks. McGill's Gymnastic Team, better known around the campus as the artful acrobats' are rounding into shape for the all-important Inter-collegiate Meet.

This Meet will take place this Saturday at 2:00 p.m. at the Currie Gym, with Toronto Varsity furnishing the opposition. The Red and White Gym Team will be out to retain the Intercollegiate Title that they have held for the last two years. Prior to that, Varsity had held the Caron Trophy for the amazing period of twelve years.

The Intercollegiate Meet will see six from McGill and Toronto compete, with the top five scorers on both teams to count. Each man will try his hand at the parallel and horizontal bars, the rings or the pommel horse and mat work.

Graduation has thinned the ranks of the team considerably as four of last year's stalwarts trod the well beaten path. When quizzed as to this year's chances, however, Coach Ryan expressed (Continued on Page 4.)

Red Quintet Meet Y Blues With Dodds Cup at Stake

By ART GUTTMAN

The hottest rivalry in town will be renewed tonight for the third year when the McGill Redmen take on the Y.M.H.A. Blues in the annual Dodds Cup game.

The Dodds Cup was put up by Brigadier Dodds in the early 1920's and is emblematic of city basketball supremacy. It was originally to be played for between the M.B.L. Champions and McGill, but at that time the Redmen weren't represented in the city league. As McGill finished up the season top of the loop, a game is being played between them and the second place Blues.

McGill has come through twice already this year against Joey Richman's boys, and want to win the Dodds Trophy for the first time in many, many years. The Y beat Mentor Moe's crew last year in an Athletics Night game for the prize.

After getting a bad game out of their system against Champlain on Monday night the team is set to take the measure of the Dominion Champs. Dave Caldwell, Jim Mitchener, and Lou Endman will be back after missing the game against the Americans, and along with the rest of the regulars, McGill is favored to take the Cup for the year to their trophy shelf.

In two regular league games against Y.M.H.A. McGill won both by fair margins, however this tilt won't be any pushover. Star of the Blues is diminutive five foot five: Mendy Morein, who climaxed a brilliant season by winning the M.B.L. scoring championship. Another prolific scorer is Murray Waxman who ended the season in third place in the individual scoring totals. In addition, on defense the Blues have one of the best guards in Canada in the person of Ben Lands.

The Dodds Trophy game is the second of a double-header, with the opening game featuring Wind-

Women in Sport

By RHODA HARRIS

All eyes are on the current edition of the women's basketball squad to bring a second intercollegiate title of the year back to this fair campus by Sunday evening. For two consecutive years, the Red and White sextet have literally had the 'Bronze Baby' grabbed out of their hands by the lightning Toronto Blues. Last winter McGill and Varsity ended up in a two way deadlock for first place; Toronto was awarded the trophy on the basis of their total points scored in the tournament, having 88 to McGill's 85.

The girls will play three games this weekend, one against each of their opponents, from Queens, Toronto, and Western. The round robin meet will commence on Friday evening, when McGill tacks one college, and will continue through Saturday, when they face the remaining two. The entire tournament will be climaxed with a banquet held in honour of the four teams on Saturday night.

Collegiate Carnivals

We especially enjoyed the spirit and enthusiasm displayed by the Macdonald students throughout their Winter Carnival last weekend. Spectators attended every event listed on the program, all the way from the big basketball game Saturday night to the ice-hockey match between McGill and Macdonald women outside in sub-zero weather. Not only did the students attend the games, but they also supported their teams, even in defeat. The cheers, led by six cheerleaders with complete response from the audience, were original and stimulating. All in all, a well-organized and fun-packed carnival.

Speaking of carnivals, Audrey Wipper's ornamental aquatic club will participate in the swimming meet this Saturday in the memorial pool. The girls previewed their eye pleasing routine out at Mac-

An intercollegiate badminton meet is scheduled for Saturday, February 24 at Toronto. With several practices weekly, manager Bliss Mathews is preparing her club for the big event.

Last Tuesday's mixed badminton tournament was won by Jean Bridson and Paddy Door. Consolation winners were Shirley Langstaff and Henry Ballon. A second such competition will be held on Tuesday, February 19—everyone is welcome.

ARCHERETTES TO VIE

Shirley Curtis has announced that her club will hold another intramural archery tournament today from 2-6 p.m. All women who are interested are urged to turn out to gain points for their year.

FENCERS DOWNED 11-5

Although defeated 11-5 by St. Lawrence University at Canton, New York, Lenore Griffin and Sue Brady displayed fine fencing, as each girl won two of their four bouts. St. Lawrence will visit Montreal on March 11, in the second of a home and home series.

COUNCIL MEETS TODAY

An evening meeting of the MWSAA is scheduled for tonight in RVC. Plans for next year and many controversial problems are to be ironed out, and every manager is urged to attend.

Taoism To Be Philosophy Club Discussion Topic

Three religions have played a major role in shaping Chinese thought, Confucianism, Taoism and later, Buddhism. Taoism is today the popular religion of the peasants, and is to be the subject of a paper to be read this evening before a meeting of the Philosophy Society, to be held at 8 p.m. in the Divinity Hall Common Room. The speaker will be Madame Nicholas, chairman of the Department of Oriental Philosophy at the University of Montreal.

Now little more than a mass of popular superstition, Taoism in the first five centuries before Christ was an elevated system of ethics, based upon a sophisticated metaphysics. Its politics advocated a laissez faire type of government, abhorred war, and protested against the discrepancy between the poverty of the peasants and the luxury of the court.

Like Confucius, Lao-Tse, the founder of Taoism, believed that if he were given high office his principles would become widely accepted by virtue of the natural force of their appeal. His metaphysics is greatly contrasted with this view. It advocates withdrawal from the temporal world of flux and contradiction, the suppression of desires and the annihilation of self-consciousness as the way to the good life. Resignation and absorption into the Tao, the preternatural being of God and creation, is combined with the overt political activity, as exemplified in the Teh, in the Tao-Teh King, the written exposition of Lao-Tse's philosophy.

Science Frat Urges Nuclear Research Aid

Winnipeg, Man.—(CUP)—(Press Wire)—Omega Lambda Mu, an international honorary Science students' fraternity, meeting at New Orleans recently, passed a resolution calling for larger grants to small universities for the purpose of nuclear research.

The resolution, copies of which are to be sent to every campus in North America, urges local governments to give increased financial aid to universities for the purpose of beginning or continuing this type of research.

The resolution was seconded by Geoffrey H. Cranford, University of Manitoba's sole member of the honorary fraternity and delegate at the confab.

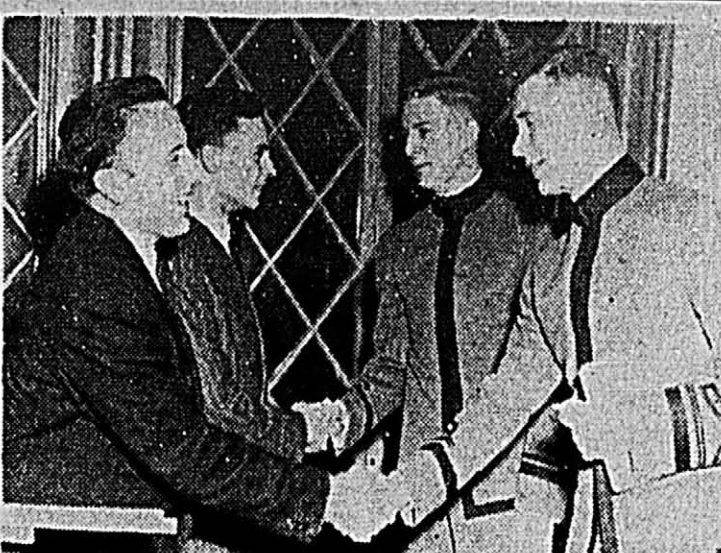

Speaking for the motion, Cranford stated it would "facilitate the pursuit of increased learning in this all-important field, so vital in the world today."

Aid in Sight for Male Snowshoers

The first mixed team of snowshoers ever to be organized will participate in a snowshoe race which will be held on Thursday night.

There are three races scheduled to start at 10:15; the 80 yard dash for men, the 80 yard dash for women and the mile (open) Gord Gilmour is organizing a McGill team to compete against the Montreal Snow-Shoeing Club for the Miss Murray trophy.

Claud Renault, who is in charge of the racing, has over $250 worth of prizes to offer the snowshoers. These prizes, which have been donated by large manufacturing firms, will be presented on the Chate Band Stand after the races.

M.O.C. Mumblings

The great thaw is here again, but there is so much snow up North that there is not too much danger of it all melting away (Famous last words...) Anyone who has been up during the last two weeks will testify to the joys of deep snow skiing. This is a new experience for most Montrealers, who being accustomed to grinding their edges into the ice, find it rather disturbing when the snow responds, their ski tips disappear and they find themselves buried under billows of "yipped cream."

We'll learn to do the telemark yet... in the meantime—call the Ski Patrol. The snow seemed to have been ordered expressly for our American visitors. The MOC house was host to groups from MIT, Dartmouth, U. of N. H., Smith, Paul Smith, RPI, Cornell, Champlain and probably others. Never have we seen so many cars around the house. They all praised our facilities and invited us to come down and use their various cabins scattered throughout the New England ski centers. However they warned us that there is not very much snow there this year.

Highlights of the week-end... Congratulations to Ann Lindsay and associates for a scrumptious turkey dinner Sunday night... Rocky's glowing report of the "long trail", 16 miles from Val Morin to St. Sauveur in a blinding snow storm... Tobogganing on the Station Hill on Saturday night... The winter camping expedition, held in a valley near Shawbridge two weeks ago, was reported to have been a great success and Hugh Stephens announced that there will be another one soon. Other future plans include the MOC being hosts to a group of underprivileged children, Sunday, Feb. 24, and a Zone cross-country race sponsored by the MOC for the first time on March 4. Also on the agenda is a "turkeys' trot" to be held at Shawbridge on March 11. This event is designed to relieve the frustrations of would-be racers and will consist of a controlled downhill and slalom race open only to unclassified skiers. There will be a special section for those who have only learned to ski during the last two years. The Executive are also working on plans for an MOC expedition to Mont Tremblant—at the lowest cost possible.

Square Dancing There will be a square dance next Tuesday night in the B.W. and F. Room of the Gym, with Lloyd Brown as caller. All old and new members are urged to turn out regularly at these fortnightly sessions. This is also a good chance to meet the gang and go skating at the Hollow Rink or swimming at the New Pool to get into the mood before the dancing.

Winter Carnival MOC'ers are urged to turn out en masse for the Carnival events especially for the night on Mount Royal which is the MOC's responsibility. There will also be a special car on the train to St. Sauveur reserved for the Laval students and justly voices of true MOC'ers are being counted on to join in a bilingual sing-song. Mimeographed sheets of French songs will be passed out. The MOC house will be open from Thursday night onwards. The cross-country trail on Sunday will be led along the Gillespie trail from Ste. Agathe to Ste. Marguerite by John Bishop. There will also be a shorter trail and ski instruction for the last time this season.

McGill Reps To Attend UN Model Council

St. Lawrence University, in Canton, New York, will be the scene of the third annual conference of the Model United Nations Security Council. This three day conference, where the delegates of eleven Universities will observe, suggest, amend or oppose a set of Resolutions in accordance with their country's foreign policy, has been set for the 15th, 16th and 17th of February.

McGill will represent the United Kingdom through two delegates, Jacques-Yvan Morin and James O'Callahan. These two will unite to uphold a Resolution on the Kashmir dispute between India and Pakistan. Morin will be the chief-spokesman on this issue. Another resolution of equal interest will be the demand to brand the United States as an aggressor in the Far East. Voicing this resolution will be the delegates from Dartmouth College who will represent the U.S. S.R. James O'Callahan will be chief-spokesman on this issue.

The primary purpose of the Model Security Council is to utilize student knowledge of current international affairs and to dramatize interest in the United Nations. Strict parliamentary procedure is sustained throughout the Council sessions.

From the eleven Canadian and American Universities (of which only two are Canadian, McGill and Queens) there will be delegates representing Brazil, China, Ecuador, France, India, The Netherlands, Turkey, U.S.S.R., United Kingdom, United States and Yugoslavia. The delegates of these countries will be given the chance to express their own personal attitude on the topic, "The U.N. and the Great Powers—What does the future hold?"

All is not work, however, in the forthcoming conference. Along with the Council sessions, there will be social entertainment, such as a banquet and numerous receptions, and finally, to make Canadians feel at home, a hockey game.

game. The individual round robin type of play is scheduled for badminton, fencing, and squash, where the top three players win 30, 20 and 10 points respectively. Five points are awarded to anyone who enters and wins one game.

Ladder tournaments are somewhat different from those we have already described. Archery, fencing, badminton, and squash are included in this kind of competition, where all games must be completed by a certain set time. Each person on a ladder may challenge the one above her, and the ultimate winner scores 25 points, the second 20, then 15, 10 and five.

Skiing and swimming come under the intramural open meets. The scoring is quite different in each tournament. Points allotted for entering and winning or playing in individual events are totaled, and the team with the most points wins 50 for its year, the second 10, and the third five. Ornamental swimming teams' results are likewise scored, with 15, 10 and five points given to the first, second, and third team respectively.

George Klein, Roy Amaran and Jerry Colivas round out the team.

All these boys will be on tap on Saturday to make the going rough for the Gacis. With the Redmen expected to knock off the Queen's Seniors the Indians will do their best to make it a clean sweep for the Red and White.

ists of having an "uneasy alliance" with the L.P.P.

Phillippe Gelin leader of the Conservative-Nationalists in his summation speech stated: "We do not vote against the bill because we are Communists; our reasons are absolutely contrary to those of the L.P.P. This coalition is of the extreme left and the extreme right. We are on the extreme right. We are conservative; we are nationalist; we and nationalist."

At the conclusion of the Parliament, before the votes were taken, Mr. Gelin extended the thanks of the U. of M. students for being invited to participate. Duncan Frazer, in turn, extended greetings from McGill to all the U. of M. students present, and stated a hope that it would not be the last of such bilingual parliaments.

Two amendments to the motion, proposed by the Progressive-Conservative and C.C.F., respectively, were defeated by uncounted votes.

The vote on the main bill was then called. The first of two uncounted votes passed it by an approximate twenty-vote majority, while the second defeated by about a dozen votes.

Upon a count being requested, the members were counted in turn as each registered an individual vote. The final total was seventy-six For, and fifty-seven Against.

During the evening, motions of commendation were extended to the efficient page-girls, and to the five Carnival Queen candidates, who were introduced to the House from the ballroom gallery.
